Final Refined Plan: The Sovereign Person-State with Bearer Businesses

Core Concept: The Sovereign Person-State of [Your Name] (SPS) is a hybrid micronation with territory defined as your physical person, an optional vessel or land plot, and a digital domain (e.g., a website or blockchain node). You govern as the sole sovereign, issue a cryptocurrency (SPSUs), and create "bearer businesses"—unregistered corporations embodied in certificates you issue, which operate under SPS jurisdiction wherever the bearer takes them. This blends physical mobility, digital presence, and economic innovation.

Step 1: Territory and Sovereignty

Territory: Your SPS includes:

Your physical person and possessions.

Optional vessel (e.g., registered in Panama) or land (e.g., a purchased plot).

Digital territory: a domain (e.g., [yourname].sps) or blockchain node, hosted in a privacy-friendly jurisdiction (e.g., Iceland) or decentralized via IPFS.

Legal Basis: Montevideo Convention (flexible territory definition), UN Charter Article 1 (self-determination), and cyberspace self-governance principles. The bearer businesses extend your sovereignty economically.

Step 2: Government, Titles, and Currency

Government: You, as "[Title] [Your Name], Sovereign of the SPS," rule over all domains—physical, digital, and economic.

Title: Self-proclaimed and trademarked in a U.S. state; recorded on a blockchain for digital permanence.

Currency: SPS Sovereign Units (SPSUs), a blockchain-based cryptocurrency (e.g., Ethereum token), backed by a smart contract or asset (e.g., silver), used within SPS and its bearer businesses.

Step 3: Bearer Businesses

Definition: A "bearer business" is a corporation issued by the SPS, existing solely as a certificate (physical or NFT) that grants the holder full ownership and operational rights under SPS law. No central registry—possession is proof of control.

Purpose: These entities conduct trade, hold assets, or offer services under your sovereign authority, shielded from external jurisdiction by SPS claims.

Legal Framing: Modeled on bearer bonds (historically valid but now restricted in many places), these leverage private contract law and your micronation’s autonomy. Issue them via SPS decrees, enforceable in private dealings.

Step 4: Legal Protections

Digital Shield: Your domain/server is an "embassy," with bearer business records stored there or on-chain, claiming extraterritoriality.

Maritime Option: A vessel doubles as a mobile SPS hub, issuing bearer certificates from international waters.

Corporate Layer: Register the SPS in Wyoming as a nonprofit governing entity, framing bearer businesses as internal "divisions."

Treaty Play: Seek recognition from digital-savvy or micronation entities (e.g., Estonia, Liberland) to legitimize bearer businesses in niche circles.

Step 5: Execution

Federal (U.S.): File under FARA; report SPSUs and bearer business transactions to the IRS as private assets.

State (U.S.): Incorporate in Wyoming, designating digital and physical assets as SPS territory.

International: Submit sovereignty claims to the UN and ICANN; register vessels or domains accordingly.

Digital: Secure your domain/server and deploy SPSUs/bearer businesses on a blockchain.

Challenges Mitigated

Recognition: Focus on de facto use (e.g., private acceptance of bearer businesses) over de jure status.

Jurisdiction: Bearer businesses rely on SPS sovereignty, enforceable only where your authority is respected—likely limited to sympathetic parties.

Final Notes

Bearer Businesses: Certificates (physical or NFTs) are your SPS's economic backbone, issued under your decree. They're legally untested but rooted in private contract freedom.

Execution: Start with digital territory (easiest), add a vessel or land for depth, and issue bearer businesses to allies or for personal ventures.

Strength: Combines physical mobility, digital permanence, and economic creativity into a cohesive micronation.
